†As with the G3 sample, the total population sample excludes all those who died before turning 20 or were adopted. Data on emigration was not available to us for the total population, but as only 0.5% of our G3 sample emigrated this unlikely to affect findings. ††For the total Swedish population we did not have data on the mother's cohabiting partner unless this was the child's father. This would be expected to underestimate family social class, by ignoring non-biological-father partners with a higher social class than the mother. This plausibly contributes to the slightly better social class profile of the G3 population.
